

THE SAN FRANCISCO GENERAL HOSPITAL FOUNDATION NEWS

Vol. 6, No. 6

Winter 2005

Dear Friends,

Reflecting on this past year, I can't help but feel great pride in the strides made by the San Francisco General Hospital Foundation. We are a stronger organization than we were two years ago. I have watched over the last several years, as both a member of the Board of Directors and as its President, the Foundation's growth, and I feel confident that it will continue to grow. This success is owing to the important role the San Francisco General Hospital Medical Center plays in our community and to the Foundation's dedicated Board.

In looking back over this year's activities, the Foundation's annual SFGH staff appreciation BBQ was a highlight for me. In many ways it was the culmination of Hearts in San Francisco. While hospital staff enjoyed good food, beautiful weather, and great raffle prizes with friends and colleagues, we announced the Hearts awards. Thank you to the many vendors and friends of the Hospital that contributed to the raffle, and congratulations to the innovative and exciting programs and services who received awards. In the following pages you will read about some of those programs and also about a group of physicians who contributed to the event.

I again must thank our Hearts in San Francisco co-chairs, Nancy Bechtle and Ellen Newman. Kudos, also, to the many SFGH Foundation board and staff members who made the program such a success. Such as the Baer and Post families, who topped off Hearts with the live auction at Giant Stadium. And to our sponsors...your belief in and commitment to Hearts in San Francisco was a gift to the city and to thousands of individuals who receive their health care at the General.

Of course, this past year was not only about hearts. On the last few of pages of this newsletter is a list of the many foundations, corporations, and individuals who gave in fiscal year 2004. It is an impressive list and for me what is particularly important is that people and organizations of all sizes and backgrounds contributed. I am particularly proud of the gifts we received from our patients and employees. Thank you.

I am also proud of the number of local foundations and corporations who provided support. Thank you.

Another accomplishment came not in the form of direct funding, but in the addition of a great leader. Katherine Ripley-Williams, the Foundation's executive director, came on board in March 2005. What we, as a board of directors, were hoping for was a leader who would bring us experience, energy, stability, wisdom and vision. Katherine has done all that and more. She has invigorated the Foundation's fundraising efforts and provided true leadership that will serve us well into the future.

I also want to thank the Foundation staff as they have worked hard and stayed focused during the last year in the midst of changes, challenges and opportunities—thank you.

Looking forward is an exciting notion indeed, as there are many interesting and exciting projects we are planning for. The Foundation will be carrying the Hearts in San Francisco program forward, turning it from a one-time event into two events that I anticipate will become an ongoing tradition and hallmark of the city. One event will continue Hearts in San Francisco with the unveiling of 3 new Hearts in Union Square on February 14, 2006. The second event occurring at the same place and on the same day is the first annual HEROES & HEARTS luncheon. At the luncheon tribute will be given to a number of San Francisco Heroes, and 12 table size Hearts by local artists will be auctioned. Both of these events will benefit the SFGH Foundation.

As we head into 2006, I am reminded of the mission of the Hospital and the Foundation's commitment to helping to carry it out. In disasters and emergencies, and in everyday life, SFGH provides trauma services and medical care that cannot be found anywhere else. These programs would not be possible without dedicated people putting their minds together to solve problems, and their hearts into helping those who truly need it.

It matters terrifically to the city and to the people who use our hospital that the whole community supports it to the best of their ability.

On behalf of the board and staff of the San Francisco General Hospital Foundation, please accept our heartfelt thanks for believing in and supporting us. Your commitment is at the center of everything we do.

Sincerely,

Have A Heart, Say Doctors: Physicians Contribute Heart Art to San Francisco General

In a show of extraordinary generosity, a group of 60 physicians came together last winter to contribute one of the Hearts in San Francisco to the San Francisco General Hospital Medical Center (SFGHMC). The heart was painted by a woman whose brother's life was saved by some of those very same physicians.

According to Ted Miclau, chief of orthopaedic surgery for SFGHMC and a member of the San Francisco General Hospital Foundation board of directors, the doctors were so moved by the Hearts in San Francisco project, they felt compelled to contribute.

"The physicians certainly appreciate the effort that was made on behalf of them and the hospital by the organizers of Hearts in San Francisco," explains Miclau. "With the diminishing resources that are available to health care, the hospital foundation is an increasingly important part of our future here. It has to be part of our mission to do whatever we can to bring added resources into our environment."

The heart has special significance to the SFGHMC community. Artist Marianne Fay's brother was literally dead on the street after a violent encounter, and was brought back to life at the hospital. "My Brother, My Heart" (Mi Hermano, Mi Corazón) is Fay's tribute to the hospital's Trauma Unit and Intensive Care Unit.

"The symbolism of the heart is not lost on us," says Renee Navarro, medical director of perioperative services. "As a doctor, you really put your heart and soul into what you're doing."

Truer words were never spoken. For 130 years, San Francisco General Hospital has served as the City's lifeline for thousands of under- and uninsured residents, providing top-quality health care, regardless of patients' ability to pay. The hospital has been able to fulfill its mission largely because of the competent, dedicated and compassionate people who work here. While many of San Francisco General's physicians could be making more money in private hospitals, they opt to spend their entire careers at the General.

Kevin Grumbach, chief of family and community medicine, has spent his entire 20-year professional career at SFGHMC. "As is the case for all the other physicians here, I'm here because I believe deeply in what we do," he says. "Our hospital and clinics are essential. If there wasn't a place like San Francisco General, many of our patients would have nowhere else to go.

Phil Darney, chief of obstetrics and gynecology, has been at SFGHMC since 1966. "I really appreciate the support the community has shown the hospital, and the hearts campaign is one more example of that," he explains.

"I think all of us physicians are very lucky to be in this environment where we can provide outstanding care for people who really need our help. We become better physicians and better people for it," says Ron Goldschmidt, founding director of the family practice inpatient service at SFGHMC.

Last November, after the hearts had been displayed throughout the city, the foundation held a special event to launch the auctioning of the hearts.

"They raised a million dollars that night," recalls Goldschmidt. "I was there with some other physicians, and we literally had goose bumps when we saw how incredibly generous people were being for our hospital.

"Every day I see the hearts," he adds, "I'm reminded of how generous our community is. And then I look right on to the patients."✍

Join us in marking the 2-year anniversary of the Hearts in San Francisco city-wide art installation at the HEROES & HEARTS luncheon. In addition to unveiling 3 new Hearts in the series, 12 table-top Hearts will be introduced at the luncheon. # Hearts in San Francisco Grants Awarded

Hearts in San Francisco has come full cycle. What began as a fundraiser in 2004 ended as a fund-giver in 2005. All told, over a million dollars was awarded to programs that will help thousands of San Francisco's neediest lead healthier, happier lives. Most of the grants will leverage San Francisco General's existing resources by helping people manage their own health, thereby reducing their need for acute or urgent care—and improving the quality of their lives.

With childhood obesity on the rise at an alarming rate, San Francisco General has emerged at the forefront of addressing this issue, especially for the underserved. The SFGH Healthy Lifestyles Program helps children change their eating habits and incorporate exercise into their everyday lives.

"Kids' lifestyles aren't what they used to be," says Bonnie Seaman, director of rehabilitation. "Their diets are completely junk-food oriented, and their meals aren't well balanced. Physical education classes have been cut, and the kids are spending less and less time being active."

The Healthy Lifestyles Clinic takes a holistic, educational, hands-on approach to helping obese children and their families, encouraging smart eating habits and providing a physical activity program to prevent future disease and weight-related health issues in children.

The Hearts in San Francisco grant will be used to purchase pedometers, notebooks, pens and pencils for the 470 children and families in the Healthy Lifestyles Pedometer Program. The materials will enable families to accurately track their increase in physical activity.

"We want to continue to promote and educate the benefits of creating a healthy lifestyle for the overweight children of the San Francisco General population," says Seaman. "This grant will be used for supplies these kids can use to literally measure their steps in improvement."

Pam Baer, SFGHF board member, presents Vivian Curd, RN, Nurse Manager, an award for the 4E Pediatric Intensive Care Unit at the Foundation Staff Appreciation BBQ in September.

For patients who have diabetes, receiving news of their diagnosis can be devastating. They are told that they must prick their finger on a regular basis to check glucose levels, completely change their eating habits, exercise regularly, and begin taking multiple medications a day. Often with many patients at San Francisco General, obstacles such as limited understanding of English, depression, and thinly stretched finances further complicate these diagnoses.

"So much of diabetes care is not what happens in the clinic, but in lifestyle," says Hali Hammer, medical director of the SFGH Family Health Center. "By giving diabetics tools for self-management, we can help them manage their illness more effectively."

To that end, SFGH Foundation awarded a Hearts in San Francisco grant to "Getting to the Heart of Diabetes Care at SFGH," a program that helps provide the best care to those who need it most. With the grant money, the program will be able to expand and refine a registry of more than 2,500 diabetics being treated at San Francisco General. The registry will give providers specific, comprehensive data from which they can determine the best treatment for each patient.

The program also includes an automated telephone diabetes management (ATDM) system, which calls patients with messages in English, Spanish or Cantonese, and prompts them to answer pre-recorded questions about their diets, medications and physical activity. The ATDM system serves as a valuable reminder to patients, as well as prompting nurse managers to call those who are having more problems.

Finally, the grant will help clinicians pursue certification from the American Diabetes Association, which will enable the program to build up its educational component, and become eligible for Medicare reimbursement.

Another patient-responsive program is also the proud recipient of a Hearts in San Francisco grant. "Improving Patient Flow and Patient Satisfaction in Buildings 80 and 90" is intended to do just that.

SF General's Family Health Center is the busiest primary care clinic in the Department of Public Health. About 53,000 patients a year are seen at the center's medical specialty, dermatology and methadone clinics, housed in buildings 80 and 90.

Every one of those patients is required to register every time he or she comes in for an appointment. At times, the registration line stretches down the hall and around the corner, blocking elevators and hallways, making it hard to get a gurney through the crowd.

"As it is now, people who show up on time end up being late for their appointments because of the registration process and physical space," says Sheila Hawthorne, nurse manager for the Family Health Center. "That backs the providers' and staff's schedules up. So everyone is frustrated, especially the patients who wait in long lines and have to deal with all the delays that ensue."

The grant will be used for renovations to registration and waiting room areas, which will not only improve patient flow in the clinics, but patient and provider satisfaction, as well. By centralizing the registration process, operating costs will be reduced, too.

"It's been a long process, and we're almost there," she adds. "I can't wait to see it."
